His text was Psalms xell::f: "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord." He said: ing this large gathering of the representatives of the Junior Order of United can Mechanies. At their request We shall devote this honor to a thankservice. We shall speak and sing blessings upon our country. One Aemrican citizens is the promotion of ican citizens is the promotion of the feeling. Patriotism is the love ne's own country better than any country. This feeling is in perfect only with God's revealed will and tily compatible with the spirit of real benevolence and brotherhood prophets of ancient Israel were ensette patriots. The man who did not love Palestine more than any other cury and Jerusalem more than any other city was "an allen from the Commonwealth of Jerusalem Nothing in literature is more pathetic and eloquent than the exclamation of the captive Jews in Bobylon; "If I forget thee, oh Jerusalem! let my right hand forget its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth!"

PROMOTES PATRIOTISM.

The "Junior Order of United American Mechanics" is an organization for the promotion of American patriolism. It is for the furtherance of this cause that they have requested this thankegiving service. It is for the cause that they gather here to-day to mingle their voices with ours in thanksgiving to God for national blessings already bestowed and in supplicating a continuance of his favor upon our people in their efforts to advance their country in every true element of national strength, glory and happiness, I am sure that the feeling which will thank God for our colonial ancessors. While I do not attach as much importance to heredity as some men are wont to do, I firmly believe that physical, intellectual and moral qualities descend, in come degree, from sire to son. I am confident that the greatness of the present generation of Americans is due large, the greatness of their ancestors. Much of their mental and moral capital is treasure which their forefathers invested. The genius and virtues of our grandsires were put out at compound interest. We are the fruits of their energy and wisdom. In our thoughts we cannot separate the greatness of the Amazon, the Nile and the Mississippi from their initial lakes and springs. Neither can we separate our present greatness from the spirit and virtues of our Pilgrim fathers, One of our poets pictures America as she stood before the first footprints of civilization were made upon her savage. civilization were made upon her savage shore. He represents her as lifting her eyes to heaven and praying—

"Bring me men to match my mountains;
Bring me men to match my plains;

Bring me men to match my plains; Men with empries in their purpose, And new eras in their brains."

That prayer was answered at Janestown and Plymouth Rock. It was answered when the first bands of Anglo-Saxon exiles moored their barks on the wild shores of this Western world. The massive oaks and grante rocks of American hills and valleys were typical of the iron will and unyielding courage of those stalwart men whom God sent from the motheriand to lay broad and deep the foundations of our institutions. On our country's map those Pligrim fathers are the foothills that slope upward toward the mountain-minded men of later generations. Their daring, enterprise, blined to make of their descendants such men as Washington, Jefferson, Hamil-ton, Adams, Madison, Webster, Choato, Everett, Lincoln, Marshall, Andrew Jackson and Robert E. Lee.

Anglo-Saxon race and had been less noble in their spirit and purposes.

The Junior Order of United American Mechanics magnify the significance and importance of our country's flag. They believe that the frequent sight of it on public buildings, in public places and in public processions will serve to promote love and loyalty to the principles and purposes of our great American system of free government. quent display of the "Stars and Stripes" has contributed much to patriotic sentiment and the growth of national unity no thoughtful and observant man will deny. In 1876, when the Bouth had only partially recovered from the crucle wounds of our Civil War, and from the confusion and irritation incident to reconstruction methods and measures, Benjamin Hill, of Georgia, recognizing the utility of our national ensign as a means of stimulating parietic pride and banishing secour national ensign as intensity of all aling patriotic pride and banishing setional feeling, gave utterance in a publishing set of the sentiment: "Men of it south, let us raise high the flag of or country; let Southern breezes kiss it; it southern sales reflect it; Southern pa

Anarchists, Socialists and Nihilists are not myths; they are not the hologobins of a diseased imagination; they are reallities; they have flesh and bones; they tread the soil and breathe the als of this "land of the free and home of the brave"; they live and move and have their being in every city and town over which the American flag floats; they lurk around our national capitol; they carry dynamite for our public buildings; daggers and pistols for our chief executives, and the deadly poison of their satanic doctrines for all who will hear them. Let us thank God to-day for the existence of an organization of men whose purpose

This patriotic association says:

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

The Junior Order of United American Mechanics declare their unfaltering allegiance and active support to the great principle of religious liberty. They stand for the complete separation of church and State. They oppose governmental patronage of any religion in any form. They believe that any appropriation of money from the public treasury to any man or any association of men for religious purposes is a violation of the sacred rights of conscience. All the sympathy and support of which I am capable shall be given to any association of men thoroughly committed to this principle. We have more religious freedom in this coning the control of the country than is enjoyed anywhere else, beneath oughly committed to this principle. We have more religious freedom in this country than is enjoyed anywhere else, beneath the sun. For this fact we should be profoundly grateful to God. But no infelligent man among you will claim that our religious freedom is complete. It is stupid to deny that even in our country religion still has the patronage of the State. As long as our national government issues its commission to men to preach the gospel and to do other religious work, and as long as our State and city governments make appropriations of money for the work of the religious sects, it is folly to say that there is not still, in some degree, an alliance between church and State in our country. Religion needs nothing and should ask is not still, in some degree, an alliance between church and State in our country. Religion needs nothing and should ask nothing of civil government but protection. It is the duty of governments to protect every one of its subjects in the exercise of his religious bellef, whether he be Protestant or Catholic, Jew or Gentile, Mormon, Buddhist or Mohammedan. When it does more than this it becomes despotic and puts its iron heel on the human conselence.

This patriotic organization has the opportunity of making one of the grandest contributions that can ever be made to human liberty. It is possible for it to secure the anforcement everywhere in this country of the doctrine embodied in Jofferson's immortal "statute of religious liberty." It is possible for this organization to increase its numerical strength to three millions. There millions of American voices, solemnly pledged and determined to abide by the principles of this order, would when out in a single year the last vestiga of governmental patronnes of religion. There is scarcely a Federal or State legislator in all the land who would dare to braye the opposition of such a patriolic complication by voting for an appropriation of public money for any religious pur-

of public money for any religious purpose.

AGAINST WHISKEY.

It is a provision of the organic law of this order that no person who is engaged in wholosaling or retailing alcoholic or apirituous liquors, as a beverage, shall be neceived into its membership. No more patrictic utterance ever contanted from any source. The liquor traffic, in multiplying drunkards, idlers, thieves and cut-throates, is laying heavier burdens on this government than any other enemy of law, order and virtue. It is doing more to despoil home of its peace and purity, to bankrupt character, to dehauch the lives of men, to wring human hearts with angulah and to rob the worth of everything which makes life worth living than any other ten cylis that can be named.

In view of these facts, the hostility of this organization to that nefarious business is one of the truest and highest exhibitions of the love of country and human beings can make. Friends of temperance; soldiers of a holy crusade; knights of a sacred chivalry; I salute you to-day as my comrades. I thank God for your faith and courage, and fervently pray that he may nerve you for every confilet with this hideous monster of iniquity, and that he may employer you rand your successors in this noble order to blot this era of oppression out and lead a better freedom in.

For all that God has done for our country—for the liberty-loving and liberty-seeking pligrims who voyaged over the perilous waters of a great sea to the shores of this Western continent; for their children and grandchildren who fought the battles of freedom and liberated themselves from the yoke of British oppression; for the men, the dauntoppression; for the men, the daunt-in men, who gathered in old indepen-ice Hall and framed and signed the n) "Declaration of independence; men who gave to us our Fed-positivation, that instrument of law which contains the highest wisdom to which man has yet i; for a century and a quarter percous, national existence; for all of prosperous national existence; for all the glorious memories that cluster about our national ensign; for our many colleges and antiversities and our grand system of free schools; for our thousands and tens of thousands of Christian sanctuaries, in which God is worshipped and the saving truths of His gospel are taught; for all of our material development, and for our progress in everything that enters into higher civilizationfor all of these things we lift our hearts

Verly, it is a good thing to gather in this Christian temple to-day and give thanks to God. It is a good thing for us. It develops the diviner faculties of us. It develops the diviner faculties of our being. It enthrones the immortal spirit over all the animal and earthly elements of our nature. It lifts us into fellowship with heaven and into harmony with heaven's King. We shall leave this sacred and exalied service with more respect for curselves, more love for our-country, more regard for humanity, and more reverence for the God of all our mercles. "Praiss ye the Lord. Let all the people praise him."

Oh that we could have such a sense of the Lord's goodness as would lift us into the heavenlies and make our music accord with that of Gabriel and his arch-doxology 'till universal space is filled with universal harmony. Hear, ch earth, and give ear oh ye heavens! Praise ye the Lord.

the Lord.

The Firemen's Bill.

The bill on the Senate calendar proposing to pension volunteer firemen who are sick or who have suffered disability in the work of saving property from destruction will be called this week and be disposed of. The bill was offered in the House by Mr. Charles T. Bland, of Portsmouth, and after a hard first was passed by that body. The measure was on the Senate calendar for several weeks before the adjournment last spring, but was not taken up. The bill will be in charge of Mr. Lyle, of Roanoke, on the floor of the Senate. Its consideration has been postponed at his request, first owing to the small attendance in the early days of the present sessione, and their owing to the present sessione, and later owing to the illness of Mr. Lyle. He has now almost fully recovered, and will probably be in his seat to-morrow.

Adams is exceedingly well known and well illed in the West End, where, among many friends, his sad bereavement has touched a responsive and sympathetic chord. There were three children in the family, and one escaped the disease by the fact that he was placed under another roof. The other two ill with the fever. At 9:30 o'clock Saturday night Maggle, a little girl of eight years, died, and the next morning—Sunday—at 8 o'clock, little James, aged eighteen months, also passed away. The funeral took place Sunday at 4 P. M. from the residence, to which many of the triangle went in suite of the infection. friends went, in spite of the infectior The children were buried in the same grave in Hollywood.

According to certain gossip that has followed the recent session of the grand jury, the gentlemen just missed bringing in an indictment against Mr. H. C. Hechler for the supposed agraement which was to make him one of Todd's deputies. Furthermore, it was stated that the agreement, had been broken off since Mr. Hechler appeared before the grand jury.

Mr. Hechler was seen a day or two ago in reference to the matter. He spoke very freely of his testimony, and admitted that he was questioned by the furymen about the deputyship matter. He told these gentlemen that he was not working for Mr. Todd under any agreement or contract for a deputyship, but that he had reason to believe that he would be in the treasurer's office when Todd went in. This belief Mr. Hechler still entertains. He denied that anything had happened in the grand jury room to affect the status of the matter, and said, as he has said before, that he still expected to be deputy treasurer.

Up to this time nothing has been heard from 'Squire R. C. Friend on the proposition for a joint session of the three magistrates who are to try the election indictments. He will probably agree, however, and the cases will be gone into Thursday morning.

Tom Mundy charged with breaking things and hitting his wife, was arrested on Saturday and the case was set for Monday. But Mundy didn't show up on Monday, and the trial was thereto be instituted for Munday meanwhile.

At the Bijou.

At the Bijou,

It looked like old times to witness a vaudeville performance on the Bijou stage. The Broad Street theatre, formerly the home of vaudeville, this week returns to its first love; whother the patrons of the house will do likewise, remains to be seen. The audience last night was not quite up to the average of the usual Monday night gathering. If a good vandeville bill, however, still has any attraction for Richmond theatre-goers, then the Bijou should be crowded at every performance this week.

Charles R. Sweet, an old favorite here, made a tremendous hit. His monologue was equally as good as his efforts at the piano, perhaps better. There was one joke that caused the audience to gasp a little, but it lingered with them, and kept them laughing long after the monologuist had finished with it.

Henry Lee did most artistle work in his impersonations of "great men, past and present." He made his changes in full view of the audience, and thus added interest to his performance.

Elife Fay was at once recognized as an artist in her peculiar line. She wins her audience with the work of her face, which she can twist into as many expressions as the great Lee himself. She is exceed-audience with the work of her face, which she can twist into as many expressions as the great Lee himself. She is exceedingly clever in everything she does during her twenty minutes' work.

Taibot and Regers do an amusing skit entitled "The Legit and His Friend." Georgia Gardner and Joseph Maddern caused many laughs in their sketch, "Too Many Darlings." Valmore and Horton were fair in a singing and dancing turn. The Maxsmith Duo, while perched on ladders, juggle as cleverly as the average performer does upon a more solid footing. This act closes the bill.
